Set in New Mexico's high country, where spectacular palisade cliffs and clear running waters dominate the landscape, Cimarron Canyon State Park is part of the 33,116-acre Colin Neblett Wildlife Area, the largest wildlife area in the state.

Once the domain almost exclusively of hunters and anglers, Cimarron Canyon is attracting a growing number of hikers, mountain bikers, campers, and wildlife watchers.

Crenelated granite formations make up sheer palisade cliffs that dominate the park's scenery. From the main canyon, day hikes and cross-country skiing are popular.

The park has no overflow camping, no back country camping, and overnight parking in day-use areas or along US 64 through the park is prohibited. This is intentional. The main reason for the park's existence is wildlife habitat and camping is restricted to protect the wildlife.

The Cimarron River is stocked with trout, usually rainbows. A 1.5 mile section is designated a "special trout water" with stringent bait and limit restrictions.
